

STABS GIRL WHO HAD REFUSED TO MARRY HIM

Batters Down Her Door and Wounds Aged Mother Also.

Frances Dondegero, a pretty young girl, and her mother, Rosa, were seriously stabbed to-day by Vincenzo Phillips in their home, No. 118 Seventh street, Long Island City. Both are now in the hospital, and the daughter may die from her injuries.

Phillips has been smitten with the young woman for some time, and on several occasions proposed marriage. She rejected his offers and he became desperate. He drank heavily last night, and at a late hour visited Frances's home. He remained for an hour, and then left, saying he would return again this afternoon.

Early to-day he rapped on the door and demanded admission. The mother told him to return later. Instead he battered down the door and, rushing into the young woman's bedroom, drew a dagger and repeatedly stabbed her in the back and breast.

Mrs. Dondegero, who is nearly sixty years old, grabbed the infuriated Italian and scuffled with him. He plunged the knife into her face, and when she fell to the floor unconscious he escaped.

LAD DIES OF BURNS HE GOT AT BONFIRE.

Brave Seven-Year-Old Had Told His Mother, "Don't Cry, I'll Be All Right."

Joseph Young, seven years old, who was burned at a bonfire yesterday in an open lot adjoining his home, No. 23 East One Hundred and Ninth street, died in the Harlem Hospital to-day as a result of his burns.

The lad, who is the youngest of three boys in the family of Henry and Mary Young, was playing round the bonfire with other boys when his sweaters caught fire. Before a passerby could wrap his overcoat around the boy he was a pillar of flame.

locked door and swear at the saffron-colored proprietor. Patience lost its cooled virtue to-day, and a crowd of men and women smashed a window and secured entrance.

They were searching the stuffy little place for their belongings, when one of them happened upon a narrow bunk behind a huge pile of unwashed garments.

Lying there delicious and weaker than a kitten was the missing My Linn. Several of the men carried the emaciated, groaning Chinaman to a drug store a block away. From there he was rushed to the Jamaica Hospital. When he had been fed and revived with strong drugs the Chinaman said he had fallen in a faint on his bunk early last Monday morning. He had been there ever since, helpless from typhoid fever, unable to give an alarm or to reach the food and water on a table near him.

Ambulance Surgeon Boise gave it as his opinion that Linn would have died of starvation before many hours. Having been found in time, he may recover.
